FAQ

Level Up: Communication Skills for Tech Professionals

Why is CTA offering this course?

CTA is committed to growing a diverse, tech-talent pipeline in Colorado. One key aspect in doing so is to provide opportunities for our tech employees to upskill. Tech education often lacks focus on core skills, and this can translate into frustrations, lost dollars, and missed opportunities in the work environment. Not surprisingly, the tech field has a much higher concentration of analytical thinkers and listeners than do most other industries. This translates directly into the ways that they communicate, as well as the messages they choose to convey, and it translates into the way they think, listen, and express themselves. This course addresses these challenges and, moreover, helps our tech leaders to grow.

Who can sign up for this course?

This course will benefit anyone working for a technology organization or in a technology role. Those best served by the course will be individuals who are mid-career to directors. This course is available to CTA members only. In addition to a learning opportunity, the course is a great way to connect with fellow tech leaders.

Can I attend just one of the sessions?

Attendance is required at all four sessions to get the full benefit of the program. Sessions will not be available à la carte.

What are the two small-group workshops for?

For the small-group workshops, you will join a group of 6 to 7 others to practice and perfect your new skills. Dates and times to be announced.

How many individuals from my team can sign up?

To ensure we have a dynamic, diverse class makeup, we limit each company to 4 attendees per course. Interested in providing the course to a larger group within your organization?
